In STEM we will explore the Boston Museum of Science (BMS) Engineering Unit- Rockets and Rovers. In each of the units two characters India and Jacob introduce the design challenges. Here is an overview of the unit. Jacob is at NASA’s Jet Propulsion Laboratory learning how to engineer rovers that can be used to explore faraway worlds. Meanwhile, India is learning about the trade-offs and variables involved in engineering a rocket as she blasts off to the International Space Station. Kids will engineer rockets and rovers to help India and Jacob explore several planets and moons in our solar system.
